Scale: 1,400 Workstations
Location: Coventry, West Midlands
Timeline: 14 Weeks

The Severn Trent Centre (STC) in Coventry is a purpose built 1400 workstation building in St John's Street. Staverton had an ongoing relationship with Severn Trent Water as part of its overall framework agreement.

However, it was decided that the firm should bid as part of a competitive process given the importance of STC. Staverton was able to secure the project thanks to an impressive proposal and a clear understanding of the client's needs. This was a unique job given the needs of the STC. The project comprised an installation of dedicated workstations for the majority of staff, coupled with the provision to accommodate Severn Trent Water's peripatetic staff within the main office areas. Working closely with the client, Staverton provided a furniture solution that helped support the accommodation of some 1700 employees at 1400 workstations. Staverton provided furniture, meeting room seating, storage tops, screens and other furniture elements for the offices together with the furniture for a range of public spaces including meeting rooms, breakout spaces, collaborative space, internet benches as well as the installation of other items to compliment the final solution.

The chosen furniture system was Staverton ZD benching which was selected for its space efficiency, looks and ability to adapt over time. Severn Trent Water were particularly impressed by the way Staverton was able to modify the products to meet a series of unique demands, not least in terms of cable management. Cat 6 cabling was used extensively throughout the building which meant that the furniture had to be customised in a way to accommodate the technological infrastructure chosen by the client. The elegant bespoke solution means that the servicing is now completely hidden under the workstations, but is flexible enough to be changed over time.

The facilities team at Severn Trent Water were incredibly impressed with the way Staverton worked within the complex logistical framework needed to rationalise the company's product portfolio and seamlessly move hundreds of people into the new building. Staverton managed the furniture installation and efficient staff transfer process.

"Staverton truly engaged with us to enable the best possible outcome, and continuously worked hard to successfully fulfil all our requirements. They worked in collaboration with us to help make the change happen. We would be very happy to use them again in the future."
